During his most recent guest appearance on WGN's The Money Show, Edward Sanchez co-founder of Fresh Start Forms, LLC stated his company's mission to teach 1 million people how to live debt free in 2008. When asked if their mission was related to Oprah's Big Give, Sanchez stated they are not associated, although he believes they share a common goal; to empower as many people as possible.

Chicago, IL (PRWEB) March 20, 2008 -- During his most recent guest appearance on WGN's The Money Show, Edward Sanchez co-founder of Fresh Start Forms, LLC stated this very mission.

On the air, Sanchez invited more local churches, schools and community centers to host his free Debt Reduction Workshops. "We have relationships with non-profit organizations throughout the city, but we're going to need more involvement from communities in order to get our education into the hands of those that need it most."

A proud member of the BBB since 2006, Fresh Start Forms brings a breath of fresh air to an industry that is flooded with new businesses that are preying on consumers struggling with debt.

Their business model is simple: teach consumers how to get out of debt by working smart and hard. Their software program and workshops alike emphasize the need to break free from the cycle of refinancing, consolidation, equity loans and bankruptcies.

Fresh Start Forms has received much praise for their two-hour workshops, described as being fun and eye-opening. Participants are held captive as Sanchez uses a combination of humor, music, video and everyday examples to teach financial independence. "People learn better when they are having fun, than when they are being lectured."

This mission is a tall order for such a small business. Fresh Start Forms appears to be David, while the lending and bankruptcy industries are clearly two Goliaths.

Undaunted by the size of this task, both founders of Fresh Start Forms say the journey to teach 1 million people will be one of the greatest experiences of their lives.

When asked if their mission was related to Oprah's Big Give, Sanchez stated they are not associated, although he believes they share a common goal; to empower as many people as possible.

Edward Sanchez is a debt expert and co-founder of Fresh Start Forms, LLC. He has worked in the bankruptcy and financial industries for 9 years. His programs have been developed from his experiences with thousands of consumers in severe debt from across the country.
